Lunch Specials

People in India walking on the roadside carrying a tiffin box along with their office bag is a typical everyday scenario. Tiffin boxes are generally made of stainless steel & oval-shaped, featuring multiple individual compartments stacked together & secured with an outer clip, & a handle on the top for easy portability.

In India, tiffin boxes has been popularised by Mahadeo Havaji Bachche to deliver quick lunch meals for the working class in late 19th & 20th centuries. It not only keeps the homemade meals warm but also fresh & intact.

From the origin in British India, tiffin has evolved to create a fascinating world of its own, a world that involves a whole range of flavoursome dishes, catered by the tiffin wallahs of Mumbai to Bakshi Bazaar of Old Dhaka.

All the Tiffin items vary on day-to-day basis to keep your palette wanting more

Our Modern Take on Beloved Roadside Street Food to High Street Cocktails

After a day-long of hard work under the scorching heat, Rickshaw Wallahs (Rickshaw Pullers) take a pause to relax & rejuvenate in nearby roadside food stalls, sipping on a cup of masala chai & a quick bite of flavoursome Vada Pav or tongue tingling fuchka.

Street food in South Asia is colourful, fresh, & varied; sometimes sharp, saucy & spicy but above all unbelievable delectable. The art & culture of street food over the decades have been modified & modernised to cater to all groups of people. There is something for the person with a sweet tooth, or to suit those looking for more of a savoury sensation. Street food (typically considered as finger foods) provides a unique food experience for a globetrotter, as eating the local food is an essential element in every tourist trip to a far-off place.

Rickshaw & Co. pays homage to this history & culture, & will take you on a roadside street food journey from Mumbai & Dhaka to the heart of Glasgow.
